About DVP

The Deep Value ETF seeks to provide investment results that, before fees and expenses, correspond to the total return performance of the Deep Value Index. The Index is comprised of 20 undervalued dividend paying stocks within the S&P 500 Index with solid balance sheets, positive earnings and strong free cash flow. The companies within the Index are weighted based on a rules-based assessment of their valuations so that stocks that are most attractively valued receive a higher weight. The full Index is reconstituted annually in September, and the portion of the Index with the 10 smallest weighted companies is reconstituted quarterly in December, March and June.

Why DVP?

- Uses a rules-based assessment of valuations to seek concentrated exposure to large, deeply discounted companies with robust balance sheets
- The potential for capital appreciation and excess return through improving fundamentals, investor activism, and Mergers & Acquisitions activity
- An innovative, rules-based value strategy with the potential benefits of the ETF structure including transparency, more tax efficient structure

An investor should consider the investment objective, risks, charges and expenses of the Fund carefully before investing. Please read the prospectus and summary prospectus carefully before investing.

Investing involves risk. Principal loss is possible. Fund shares are bought and sold at market price (not NAV) and are not individually redeemable and will be issued and redeemed at their NAV only through certain authorized broker-dealers in large, specified blocks of shares called creation units and otherwise can be bought and sold only through exchange trading. Creation units are issued and redeemed principally in kind. Shares may trade at a premium or discount to their NAV in the secondary market. Brokerage commissions will reduce returns. The Fund is non-diversified, meaning it may concentrate its assets in fewer individual holdings than a diversified fund. Therefore, the Fund is more exposed to individual stock volatility than a diversified fund. As with all index funds, the performance of the Fund and its Index may differ from each other for a variety of reasons. For example, the Fund incurs operating expenses and portfolio transaction costs not incurred by the Index. In addition, the Fund may not be fully invested in the securities of the Index at all times or may hold securities not included in the Index. The Index methodology is based on a value style of investing, and consequently, the Fund could suffer losses or produce poor results relative to other funds, even in a rising market, if the methodology used by the Index to determine a company's value or prospects for exceeding earnings expectations or market conditions is wrong. In addition, value stocks can continue to be undervalued by the market for long periods of time.

Any tax or legal information provided is merely a summary of our understanding and interpretation of some of the current income tax regulations and is not exhaustive. Investors must consult their tax advisor or legal counsel for advice and information concerning their particular situation. Averages are market weighted. Price/Cash Flow is the ratio of a stock's price to its cash flow per share. Free cash flow represents the cash that a company is able to generate after laying out the money required to maintain or expand its asset base. Price/Earnings Ratio is the price of a security divided by the last twelve months earnings per share of the security. Market Capitalization of an individual, publicly traded company is calculated by multiplying the company's stock price by the total number of its shares outstanding. An intraday indicative value (IIV) is a calculation based on the ETF basket. It uses the shares/components in the ETF each day and is calculated throughout the day. Net asset value (NAV) per share is calculated by subtracting total liabilities from the total assets, then dividing by the number of shares outstanding. The S&P 500 Index is a broad based unmanaged index of 500 stocks, which is widely recognized as representative of the equity market in general. You cannot invest directly in an index.
